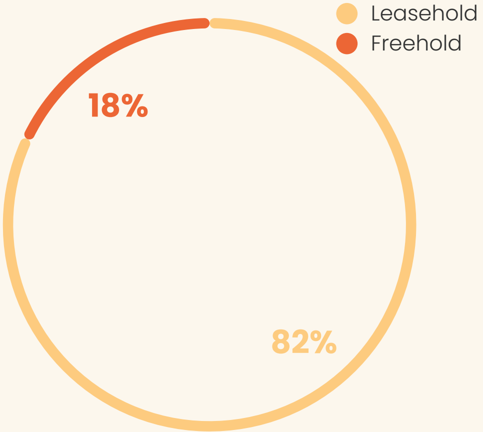
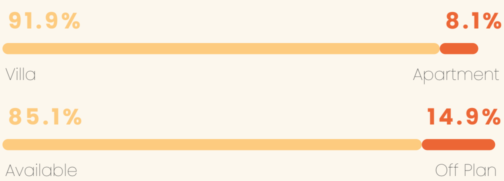
MARKET BREAK DOWN





Canggu is Bali's largest and most liquid leasehold market, and 2025 has reinforced both the opportunity and the challenge that comes with that scale. Supply continues to grow: leasehold at 82%, villas at 91.9% of inventory, apartments up to 8.1%, and, most significantly, off-plan supply more than doubling to 14.9% from 7% in 2024. That pipeline expansion is the defining development of the year and sets the conditions for everything that follows.

Median pricing has held stable at $298k, supported by consistent demand absorbing new stock rather than by any supply constraint. But discount rates remain the highest of all five locations reviewed, sitting between -15% and -20% throughout 2025 and unchanged from 2024. Buyers in Canggu continue to hold real negotiating leverage, and the data confirms it. This is not a market where you pay asking price. The combination of deep inventory, a doubling pipeline, and persistent discount rates creates a clear dynamic: Canggu rewards disciplined buyers and tests sellers who overprice.

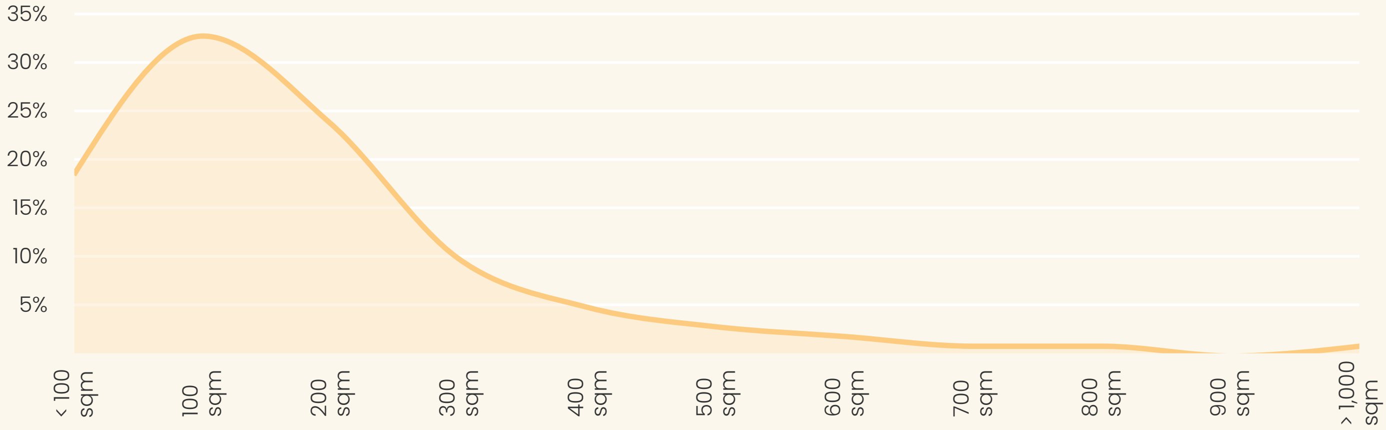
PROPERTY SIZE DISTRIBUTION

DATA FOR LEASEHOLD VILLAS ONLY



Property sizes across Canggu have compressed modestly year-on-year, with the majority of stock now sitting below 200 sqm, a reflection of the market's ongoing shift toward compact, rental-optimised product. Median sizes run from 60 sqm for 1-beds through to 512 sqm for 6-beds, with most categories slightly smaller than 2024. Lease terms are concentrated at 30 years, the most widely available tenure. Annual pricing steps from around $10k for 2-beds to $35k-$40k for larger configurations.

On the rental side, Canggu's average occupancy of 61% sits well above the Bali market average of 54%, a strong result given the volume of competing supply in the market. However, daily rates have softened across most bedroom types relative to 2024: 1-beds from $129 to $117, 2-beds from $176 to $144, 4-beds from $445 to $364. Against Bali averages, Canggu's rates remain competitive but the downward trend is clear. Occupancy is holding; rates are not. Investors should model conservatively on nightly rate assumptions and focus yield expectations on occupancy consistency rather than rate growth.
