MARKET BREAK DOWN

Bingin is defined by scarcity, and 2025 has deepened that characteristic. Available stock continues to contract across all bedroom segments, leasehold tenure accounts for 96% of listings, and villas represent over 98% of total inventory. There is almost no product diversity here, which is precisely the point. What Bingin offers is a tightly held, identity-driven micro-market where supply discipline has historically supported pricing.

However, 2025 introduces a note of caution: the median sale price has held flat at $300k, unchanged from 2024 year-end, but unlike 2024 where prices climbed steadily through the year, 2025 shows almost no directional movement at all. Discount rates remain elevated at -8% to -10% despite the supply constraints, scarcity alone has not been enough to close the gap between buyer and seller expectations. The off-plan pipeline has also pulled back, declining to 42.2% from 48% in 2024, suggesting developers are introducing future stock at a more measured pace. Bingin remains compelling, but the growth momentum of 2024 has clearly plateaued.

PROPERTY SIZE DISTRIBUTION

DATA FOR LEASEHOLD VILLAS ONLY

Bingin’s size profile is among the most compact in the market, with the bulk of stock concentrated below 150 sqm. Median sizes are consistent with 2024, 1-beds at 76 sqm, 2-beds at 137 sqm, 3-beds at 205 sqm, signalling product specification has held steady rather than being compressed to chase lower price points. Lease terms are weighted toward 30 years, providing solid holding period confidence.

On the rental side, Bingin benchmarks well against the Bali market average of 54% occupancy and $356 blended daily rate. At 57% average occupancy, it sits above the market baseline. Daily rates are strong across most bedroom types: 1-beds at $162, 3-beds at $286, and 6-beds at $942, all ahead of Bali averages for their respective categories. The 2-bed segment at $160 sits marginally above the $137 market average. Bingin’s rental credentials are genuine, the yield case is supported by real occupancy depth and rate premiums that reflect the location’s scarcity and appeal.
