MARKET BREAK DOWN

Sanur has long been Bali's slow-and-steady contender, less chaotic than Canggu, more refined than Kuta. While the beachfront promenade remains timeless, the property market has experienced some movement. Available supply is tight, making up just 3.5% of the total leasehold market, yet prices have taken a sharp 8.5% dip over the past year, while the median price still remains 8% above the market median; a nod to Sanur's enduring appeal. Buyers, however, aren't rushing in, with just 19% of listings having cleared from the market, based on a modest 64 recorded sales.

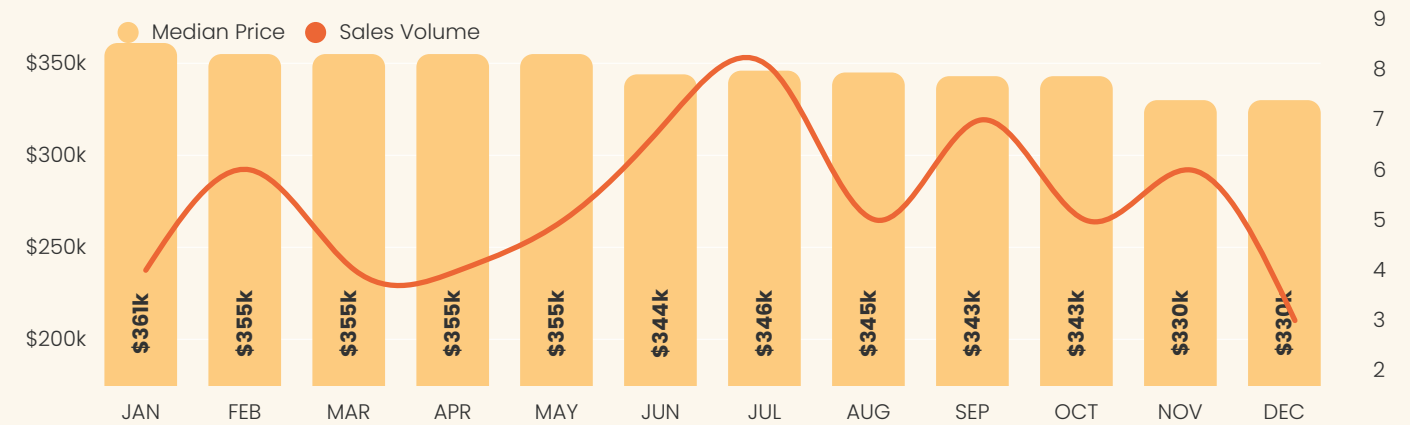

Where Sanur shines is rentals. With a healthy 62% rental performance, rentals in Sanur sit well above the market average of 55%, with investors maintaining a strong incentive to hold. Although sales are slow, Sanur's rental market is still proving demand for well-placed properties, with no sight of this going anywhere.

Sanurs’ property market provides an interesting duality; nearly 70% of available listings are larger properties, with 3-bedroom villas making up 47.5% of supply and 4-bedrooms adding another 21.2%. But when it comes to actual sales, buyers are opting smaller. Three-bedroom properties account for 42.2% of transactions, while 2-bedroom homes make up 32.8%.

Interestingly, Sanur’s villas also tend to be larger than the Bali market average, with the median property 8% bigger than typical island-wide listings. Overall, Sanur offers a wealth of larger properties servicing the existing market, while the market lacks smaller properties to meet the rising demand.
